Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, 3 times per week, 30-min resistance training program on the muscle strength and endurance of 10 healthy young adults. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group performed no resistance training, while the exercise group performed a resistance training program consisting of three sets of 10 repetitions of a resistance exercise. The subjects were tested at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly greater muscle strength and endurance than the control group at 12 weeks. The control group had no significant change in muscle strength and endurance. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, 3 times per week, 30-min resistance training program can improve muscle strength and endurance in healthy young adults.
